Imagine what would've happened if Peyton Manning had turned pro after his junior season at Tennessee.

Had he turned pro in 1997,create nba jersey, he might've been a New York Jet and certainly wouldn't have been an Indianapolis Colt.

ManningThe Jets owned the No. 1 pick in 1997. The Colts selected Manning first overall in 1998.

New York Post columnist Mike Vaccaro looked back on the turn of events:

Posted by ESPN.com's Pat Yasinkas

There are no guarantees Jets general manager Bill Parcells would have selected Manning ahead of Ohio State tackle Orlando Pace. When given a choice between Jake Long and Matt Ryan for the Miami Dolphins in 2008,majestic baseball jersey,pro combat jerseys, Parcells went with the franchise left tackle. Vaccaro also points out the Jets had Neil O'Donnell,football jersey frames, who was a year removed from the Super Bowl.

But Phil Simms was enamored with the idea.

"That would have been a match made in heaven because you're talking about two guys who see the game exactly the same way,Broncos Jerseys,replica mlb jersey," Simms said of a Parcells-Manning partnership.

It's a fanciful thought to picture Manning in green.

How many Super Bowls would the Jets have won?

Would there be such a thing as a New England Patriots dynasty if Manning was in the AFC East?
